EXPLOSIONS AT POWDER MILLS

Terrific Explosions at the Powder Mills at Pleasant Prairie Lay That Plant in Ruins

At about 3:15 Saturday morning the people of Antioch, and those living as far south as Austin, Cook County, were suddenly awakened from their slumbers by two terrific reports which shook houses, rocked beds and rattled dishes, the cause being the explosion of the powder mills at Pleasant Prairie, Wis. The reports were loud and seemed to be in the very center of our village, many thought the bank was being robbed and grabbing firearms ran into the street, while others were sure that it was an earthquake.

Eight hundred barrels of powder exploded with the estimated loss of $50,000. All the north shore towns were shaken and the shock was felt even at Milwaukee. The official of the company could not give out any estimate as to the loss from the explosions but it is variously estimated by employees of the plant at from twenty to fifty thousand dollars. Fortunately no lives were lost in the explosion as only three men in the buildings at the time the explosion took place and these, while stunned, escaped with slight injuries.

The land about the plant presents an awful scene of desolation. Nothing remains of the large buildings but three holes in the ground. The debris from these buildings, little more than kindling wood, is scattered for miles over the land about the powder mill property. Great iron pipes which had been used for shafting twisted into fantastic forms by the strength of the powder, were scattered hundreds of feet from the buildings which they were located and buried in the earth to the depth of several feet. Sheet piling which had formed the siding of the mill was thrown into the streets of Pleasant Prairie, nearly a mile away, and all the windows in the home of Joe Cow, fully two and a half miles from the scene of the explosion were broken.

The property around the big plant resembles a great field of burnt timber with blackened timbers sticking out of the ground like stumps. Railway tracks were torn up and the rails twisted like the boughs of saplings. Every window in the power house of the plant was broken, while a great deal of debris was thrown over the keg mill, 300 yards from the destroyed buildings, wrecking the building and machinery.

The explosion came without a warning, and no cause can be assigned for it unless it was the fact that some part of the machinery became disabled. The plant had been working at full force on Friday, in order to get out several large orders and the glazing mill was filled with powder which was to have been kegged for shipping Monday. Eight hundred kegs of blasting powder were in the glazing mills.

David Riesling, the nightman, was in charge of the glazing of powder but by some good fortune he had gone to the engine room of the plant a few minutes before the shock came. Riesling had just left the engine room to return to the glazing mill when he heard the report.

In a flash the great mill went up in the air and there was a rain of debris. Riesling, who had been in an explosion a few months ago, crouched down on the ground and five seconds later the second explosion occurred in the press mill. Henry Gager, the engineer, and his fireman, James Geddis, were at work in the engine room. They were thrown from their feet into the center of the room and were picked up later stunned and bleeding, but not seriously injured.

The force of the explosion completely cut out the electric lights in the plant and the men groped about the building to rescue the men who had been at work. Riesling was one of the first to escape from the plant and he hurried to shut the gates to prevent people from entering. It was feared that the other glazing mill would be struck by some of the flying debris and another explosion follow.

In a short time several hundred people, who had felt the shock hurried to the plant, but there was nothing to be done as fire did not follow the explosion. Greatest havoc was done to homes in and about the village of Pleasant Prairie, and not a house escaped without some injury. The big windows in the King and Tourtelotte stores fell with a crash, and along the streets people could be found sweeping out broken glass. Hundreds of dollars will not restore the damage done to the houses in Pleasant Prairie.

In some cases the sleeping inmates of the houses were thrown from their beds while in some houses plaster was broken off the walls. Hoops from the press mill were thrown into houses in the village of Pleasant Prairie, while huge chunks of iron which had been parts of valuable machinery were hurled three hundred yards from the buildings.

The buildings destroyed were not of great value, but the machinery housed in them cost thousands of dollars. The glazing mill was eighty feet long and thirty feet in width and the press mill was of the same dimensions. The coming mill was a small building thirty by forty feet.

The entire plant is shut down as a result of the explosion and over a hundred men are out of employment. The shocks from the explosion was felt within a radius of thirty miles, people in Racine, Kenosha and Waukegan being awakened by the explosion. It was thought at first that the shock was an earthquake. It is impossible at this time to tell the extent of damage done to property in the neighborhood of the plant.

The mills will be rebuilt at once.

VIOLATED GAME LAW; GIRL KISSED WARDEN

A way has finally been found to reach the heart of Deputy Game Warden Michael Kleist and it was discovered by Miss Bertha Rickerson, the beautiful daughter of T. A. Rickerson, a wealthy Chicago sportsman, who was arrested at Silver Lake Sunday evening on a charge of catching bass out of season. Miss Rickerson found the way to the heart of the deputy game warden by planting a smacking kiss on his lips and before the deputy warden had recovered from his surprise and excitement he had consented to the release of Rickerson with a fine of $10 and costs which was promptly paid.

The little comedy was enacted in the justice office of Henry Blum in the town of Salem at 2 o'clock Monday morning. Rickerson had been arrested just before midnight and his daughter and son had followed him to the justice court. The young woman was heart broken and the son fainted in the court room. Rickerson felt deeply the shame of his arrest and when the deputy game warden insisted on prosecuting the case the young woman came up and threw her arms about him to plead for the father. Kleist was in a dreadful ticklish position and before he could extricate himself the young woman had kissed him. When Kleist considered the grief of the young woman and her brother, and the penitence of the father he did not on a heavy fine but consented to the court fining Rickerson $10 and costs of the action. Rickerson immediately paid it. He had two bass and two cat fish in his possession.

Geo. Sill Welles, a Chicago millionaire connected with the Welles Fuel Saving company and other companies in Chicago, was also a victim of the game warden on Sunday night. Welles was taken into custody on board a Wisconsin Central train near the village of Trevor. He had been fishing over near Rochester and was taking the fish back to Chicago when taken by the officer. Welles was smoking a good cigar decidedly satisfied with the day's sport when Warden Kleist entered the car and sat down by him. On the floor was a basket filled with nice cleaned bass and pickerel and Welles had no idea that the warden was near.

After a little conversation Kleist showed his credentials and insisted on looking into the basket. Welles protested that he had no fish and declared that it was an outrage for the warden to attempt to stop him. But the basket came open and Welles was promptly arrested. Then he began to plead for mercy and even offered to get Kleist a better job in Chicago if he would allow him to go. Welles was taken to Winnet where a couple of business men went his bond for $200 and he was allowed to go to Chicago on a later train, promising to come to Kenosha Monday morning and appear to answer the charges against him.

Welles had seen a lot of sport during the day and the basket was well filled with the best fish the lake afforded. It is alleged that there was a large party of Chicago sportsmen, who had some good luck at Camp Lake, but aided by one of the men residing in the neighborhood they managed to escape.

Welles is considered one of the biggest catches ever made by a game warden in this section. He was arraigned before Justice McCarron Monday morning and was fined $35 and costs amounting in all to $44.72. The fine was paid.

THREE MILLION FISH SUPPLIED.

Waters in Lake County are replenished by the Government.

Three million immigrants passed through Chicago one day last week on their way to colonization in Lake County, Ill. A single car carried the entire colony, for not one of the number was more than three days old and they didn't require much space.

The travelers were fish, sent by the United States fish commission from the hatchery at Put-in-Bay, O., to be placed in the streams of Lake County. For eighteen months Illinois fishermen have been trying to persuade the government to replenish the waters of the county. There are between 300 and 400 lakes in the region, the largest of which is Fox lake.

Recently Nat Cohan, president of the Illinois fish commission, went to Washington and induced the government to send the "immigrants."

Don't Kill the Hawk.

Man has slain more than any other animal in trifling with nature's balances. Clover crops and the killing of hawks are apparently unrelated yet the hawks eat the field-mice, the field-mice prey on the immature bees, and the bees fertilize the clover-blossoms. The death of a hawk means an over-increase of field-mice and a consequent destruction of the bees.—Country Life in America.

DOWIE IS DECLARED BANKRUPT

Judge Landis of the United States Court Declares Dowie Bankrupt --Voliva Restrained

John Alexander Dowie was Tuesday in Chicago declared a bankrupt by Judge Landis of the United States court after his own attorney had admitted the "overseer's" insolvency.

An order of adjudication was entered and the creditors were allowed five days in which to suggest future action to the court. The appointment of a receiver is not deemed probable.

Attorney Haley appeared for Dowie in the hearing on the suit for a trustee filed by Voliva, on the answer to which by Dowie the court based the decision that Dowie is bankrupt.

The court entered an order restraining Voliva and all who act for him from disposing of any Zion property, except such as is necessary in the conduct of the ordinary business enterprises, until the estate is adjudicated.

"What does this answer mean?" was asked Attorney Haley.

"It means that Dowie is bankrupt" replied the apostle's lawyer.

The order of adjudication was at once ordered to go on record.

Judge Landis took action after he had given consideration to a report by Frank Jones of the American Trust and Savings Bank and William E. Muse, credit man for John V. Farwell & Co., whom he had appointed as examiners for the court into the affairs at Zion City.

The gist of this report, which is based on a thorough study of conditions in Zion including long cross-examinations of Dowie and Voliva follows:

The estate is large and should yield 100 cents on the dollar and a considerable surplus.

Practically every enterprise at Zion is being operated at a loss, and some show great deficits.

Expenses have been reduced and retrenchment has aided the standing of Zion.

There are no evidences of misappropriation of money, securities or real estate by either the present or past administration.

Litigation has placed the business of Zion at a practical standstill.

The city's credit has been reduced to a C. O. D. basis.

The population has suffered large inroads.

Judge Landis, in discussing his decision from the bench, said:

"I am satisfied that this is not a case that calls for the appointment of a receiver.

With the entering of the order restraining Voliva all injunction-forbidding action in the state courts is removed, and the court will hereafter stand upon its own order, leaving the parties free to move in addition as they wish through other branches of justice."

Judge Landis, declared that, for reason of his own, he did not desire to make the entire report public but intimated that in no part of it are there criminal charges against Dowie.

WILL HAVE MEETING JULY FOURTH

Libertyville Trotting Association has Announced Its Date and Purposes

The Libertyville Trotting association has finally concluded to open the season in this section with a meeting the week of July 4. It comes at an opportune place and time to warrant success. No nearby large meeting precedes it, and as it antedates the opening of the grand and Great Western circuits it affords a chance to get in preliminary work with a good margin of profit. Last year the purses for the same week were $500, this year they are $600, with a lengthy program, as follows:

TUESDAY JULY 3.
2:30 trot.....	$600
2:25 pace.....	600
2:13 pace.....	600
WEDNESDAY, JULY 4.
2:21 trot.....	$600
2:12 trot.....	600
Free-for-all pace.....	600
THURSDAY, JULY 5.
2:17 pace.....	$600
2:09 pace.....	600
2:15 trot.....	600
FRIDAY JULY 6.
2:25 trot.....	$600
2:20 pace.....	600
2:18 trot.....	600

To make racing snappy and allow people to get home before dark, the contests will be best two in three. Entries for the meeting close June 25 with Sec. J. S. Grady at Libertyville at the customary 5 per cent.

President J. W. Luttrell advises that proper steps will be taken at once to insure good transportation facilities, which was the principal drawback last year.

Paradoxical.

Arctic explorers state that the water which will allay our thirst augments it when congealed into snow, and that the natives of the Arctic regions prefer enduring the utmost extremity of thirst rather than attempt to remove it by consuming snow. Yet if the snow be melted, it becomes drinkable water.

ZION LEADERS IN ACTUAL WANT

While Squabble goes on Many are without Food, Fuel or money.

While the Voliva and Dowie factions are squabbling in the courts and rejecting all offers of settlement by arbitration or at the hands of commissions appointed by the court, the suffering in Zion City grows more intense every day.

Little children scantily clothed are going about from house to house offering for sale bunches of violets which they have gathered in nearby woods and for which they hope to obtain a few pennies that will ward off starvation from themselves and their parents.

One of the heaviest stockholders in Zion has not had a fire with which to cook food in his fine brick mansion for over a week.

"I can't get enough money to buy food, let alone buying fuel," he said in explaining his plight.

It is reported that Decon Granger, the present financial manager in Zion, has deprived himself and family of the necessities of life to such an extent that neighbors have taken baskets of food to his house.

The announcement from Shiloh house that Dowie will leave for his summer home at Ben MacDhui next Friday has been hailed by the Voliva faction as an indication that the first apostle recognizes how hopeless is the task of trying to win back the allegiance of his former followers. By others this move is taken to mean that the first apostle fears for his personal safety.

At the Shiloh house it is stated that Dowie has always spent a large portion of the spring and summer months on his estate at Ben MacDhui, and that his visit this spring is no departure from his established custom.

Zion watch tower, the first structure erected by Dowie, has been razed, and the lumber is being used to repair the side walks.

In Tennyson's Land.

A reader at Buckingham, England, wrote to a London newspaper, asking for the name of the author of the line, "God's finger touched her, and she slept." He said the local burial board would not let him put it on his wife's tombstone unless he gave the author's name. Apparently the members of the burial board are not readers of Tennyson.

INSANE MAN ENDS HIS LIFE UNDER TRAIN

He Escaped From Sanitarium Guard and Jumps Beneath Train.

Edward D. Harber, 49 years old, of Bloomington, an inmate of the Kenilworth sanitarium, was struck and killed by a North-Western railroad train in Kenilworth Saturday evening after escaping from his guard, John Kelly.

Harber had been in the sanitarium several months and was believed to be recovering. He was allowed to go out of the immediate confines under guard for exercise and it was while taking his usual evening stroll that he suddenly became seized with a desire to escape.

The guard was taken unawares when Harber dashed away from him and ran toward the tracks, a short distance away. When Harber reached the crossing, he ran on the tracks on which the regular 7:40 o'clock train was approaching at full speed.

Harber was one of the best known and wealthiest business men of Bloomington, a member of Harber Brothers, dealers in agricultural implements, one of the leading institutions of central Illinois.

He occupied one of Bloomington's mansions. He leaves a wife and four daughters. Mr. Harber was prominent in club and social circles.

MAKES A SACRIFICE

Isaac Stephenson Turns His Kenosha Herd Over to the State

In order to aid the officers of the state in their effort to stamp out the tuberculous disease among the cattle of the state, former Congressman Isaac Stephenson has turned his famous Kenosha county herd over to the state veterinary with instructions that every animal in the herd found affected with the disease be slaughtered at once.

State Veterinarian E. D. Roberts appeared before Justice McCarron at Kenosha and asked for the appointment of a board of appraisers to determine the value of the cattle to be taken by the state.

Veterinarian Roberts and his assistants went to the Stephenson farm to begin the work of testing the cattle. The cattle have already been tested by James Torrey, the manager of the big farm, and he is satisfied that many of the animals have tuberculosis. No number is stated in the request for the appointment of appraisers, but it is said that about 75 animals are affected with the disease and Mr. Stephenson will insist that every one of these animals be taken by the state and killed.

The sacrifice made by Mr. Stephenson is a great one as many of the cattle are very valuable. Only a few days ago the manager of the farm refused to accept $200 for one of the cows which is to be tested by the state officials. In accordance with the state law the value of the cattle is to be determined by the board of appraisers, but it is understood that in no case shall the state pay more than $35 for any one animal. There is scarcely an animal on the Stephenson farm that is not worth many times the amount set by the state.

The herd is the most famous herd of milk cows in this section of the country and the loss to Mr. Stephenson will be thousands of dollars.

FEW OF 10,000 ANALYSES.

Among Them Artificial Water Submitted to New York Health Board.

There is an analytical department connected with the division of laboratories of the board of health, and any person who does not think that it is a busy department is mistaken, says the New York Sun. As many as 10,000 demands for analyses are made upon it each year, and the diligence of those in charge is shown by the fact that at the end of the year there are never more than 25 or 30 cases awaiting a report.

Some of the demands are peculiar. One applicant demanded and obtained an analysis of a piece of soap; another, of a "pan said to contain pudding."

There were two analyses of ginger, one of honey, one of hair restorer, one of orange marmalade, two of olive oil, one of pie, seven of opium, and one—only one—of whisky.

Only three specimens of candy were sent in for analysis during the period covered by the last report, only two of butter and only two of bread, but there was one analysis of an artificial watermelon, two of ground mustard, two of theater entrance cloths, one of "ten in pitcher," and one of a piece of clay.

There does not appear to have been any analysis of wood alcohol, but there were four of ice cream. There was one official analysis of "beef and."

The chief work of this department of the division of laboratories is the analysis of milk and of water.

BRIGHT'S DISEASE

Many people who are neglecting symptoms of kidney trouble, hoping "it will wear away," are drifting towards Bright's Disease, which is kidney trouble in one of its worst forms.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

stops irregularities, strengthens the urinary organs and builds up the worn-out tissues of the kidneys so they will perform their functions properly. Healthy kidneys strain out the impurities from the blood as it passes through them. Diseased kidneys do not, and the poisonous waste matter is carried by the circulation to every part of the body, causing dizziness, backache, stomach trouble, sluggish liver, irregular heart action, etc.

If you have any signs of Kidney or Bladder trouble commence taking FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at once, as it will cure a slight disorder in a few days and prevent a fatal malady. It is pleasant to take and benefits the whole system.

How to Find Out.

You can easily determine if your kidneys are out of order by setting aside for 24 hours a bottle of the urine passed upon arising. If upon examination it is cloudy or milky or has a brick-dust sediment or small particles float about in it, your kidneys are diseased, and FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE should be taken at once.

G. B. Burhans Testifies After

Four Years. "I had been entirely cured of a severe kidney trouble by taking less than two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure. I entirely stopped the brick-dust sediment and pain and symptoms of kidney disease disappeared. I am glad to say that I have never had a return of any of those symptoms during the four years that have elapsed, and I am evidently cured to stay, and heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Cure to any one suffering from kidney or bladder trouble."

ORIGIN OF "TWENTY-THREE"

Hero of Dickens' Story Who Died on the Guillotine Was in Line on That Number.

Dickens lovers have no trouble these days in proving that all of our supposedly up-to-date Americanisms are merely stolen expressions from their favorite author. They have indeed found that Dickens used many phrases and expressions that have been taken up to-day as universal say-words, and the latest acquisition of the enthusiasts of this sort is told in the statement that Dickens originated the expression "twenty-three," which in the vernacular of the present is used to express "all in," "chase yourself," "skiddoo," "the end," and many other things.

It will be remarked by anybody, says the Kansas City Star, that in the last chapter of "The Tale of Two Cities" Dickens describes the procession of human-laden tumbrils to the guillotine. In one of them is Sidney Carton, the hero. In a garden overlooking the hideous machine is a group of old women knitting. As the heads fall in the basket one after another the women knit stealthily and count them out loud. The paragraph describing the last moments of Sidney Carton reads thus:

"The murmuring of many voices the upturning of many faces, the pressing on of many footsteps in the outskirts of the crowd, so that it swells forward in a mass, like one great heave of water, all flashes away 'Twenty-three!'"

There you have it. You can take it for what it is worth.

EACH STORE HAS A PERSONALITY OF ITS OWN AS PROnounced as the personality of individuals. "A good store, but careless," you say of one. "Full of tricks; worth watching," is the comment about another. "Conservative and safe, but pretty high priced," is the estimate of a third. A fair store and a careful one is the judgment we have worked the hardest to deserve for the Hein-Ornstein store. Fairness in its broadest sense may be expected here—fairness to producers, from whom we buy (the greatest aid to securing the best the market affords), no less than to customers, for whom we gather goods from all over the world. A fairness which makes your permanent satisfaction a requirement in each transaction. A fairness which assures low pricing—the least cost for worthy goods. A careful store, too—for that we work no less than to be fair. Carefulness eliminates from the Hein-Ornstein stocks everything not thoroughly worthy. Carefulness that makes sure that promises are kept—that the details of every transaction are carried out to the limit of fulfillment. This store stands for these characteristics. They express its personality. They have won the confidence of Lake County people. Thousands of customers will testify to the fact that this is the store where every promise is kept.

THIS STORE'S PERSONALITY.

IT IS THE SAME OLD STORY OF CLEARING THE BIG STORE
before one season ends in order to be ready for another. Old Sol's busy days are near at hand and the big orders of summer goods are even now commencing to pour in and find places in our stock room and even in such places in the store as we can vacate for their reception. We want the aid of our old friends and new ones as well, to secure the room, and, therefore, away in advance of others, who are still figuring on securing the last penny of profit from their spring stocks, we cast aside all idea of further profit on spring goods, satisfied with the splendid spring trade enjoyed, and go to the ruthless price cutting that makes it possible for us to close out every item of our spring stock (and at a time when our customers can gain the full benefit) before it is necessary for us to commence to display the light and airy things for the sweltering days of summer. We don't wait until the spring season is over before we cut prices to the quick. It is our well-known policy to always lead the procession. We begin to show new goods before others and likewise always hold our clearing sales while the season is at its height, so that we are always assured of a host of eager purchasers for the unsurpassable values we offer at the time when they are most appreciated by the public.

It is Only to be Expected

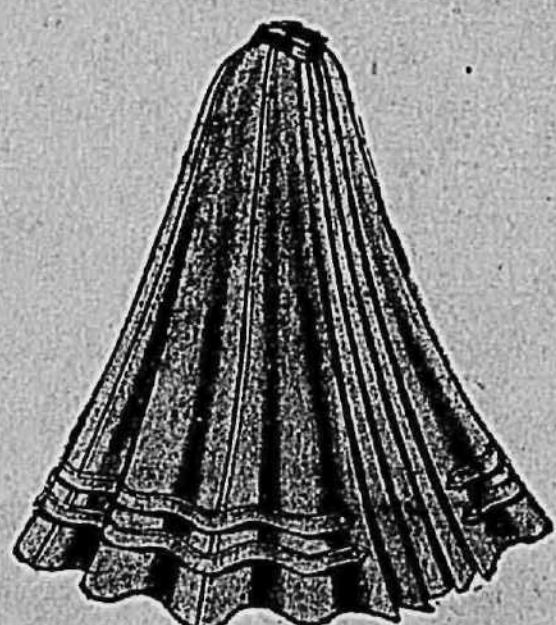

That a store that bends every effort to one particular department should excel. The striking truth of this is well proven at the Hein-Ornstein store. Stores that handle codfish, overalls, cowhide boots, bed ticking, safety pins and chewing gum, hair oil, tooth brushes and plug out are not expected to be experts in any one line, especially in Ladies' Furnishings. WE DEVOTE OUR EFFORTS EXCLUSIVELY TO LADIES' READY-TO-WEAR
GOODS and the result is most apparent.

Our magnificent showing of Fine Suits this Spring was to the ladies of this section. Never before had they believed it possible to secure such handsome and perfect garments ready to wear. The old theory of half a dozen trips to the tailor or dress makers and the tedious unnumbered fittings has been exploded. The splendid patronage we have enjoyed in this department and words of praise and approval from our customers has been most convincing assurance that we are able to fit and make the most fastidious dressers. The marked savings we have been able to make our customers also some all long remain with them as a pleasant memory.
Our ability to please is no longer questioned. It is all in the same as in any other business. Amateurs cannot do this. We have made the ready-to-wear business a

A Slaughter in the JACKET AND COAT Section.

Nothing less than an unchangeable determination to never carry coats and jackets from one season to another would ever induce a merchant to make the sacrifice we are making—sacrifices of values and manufacturer's cost that these price stories will tell. We have mentioned before that WE DID NOT HAVE
ONE WINTER COAT OR JACKET
LEFT FROM THE WINTER SEAS-ON TO CARRY OVER. THE LAST ONE WAS SOLD BEFORE THE COLD WEATHER WAS OVER. We know this is a statement that will make some would-be competitors "sit up and take notice," but it is a fact that we can make affidavit to and can prove, and we will give $500.00 to any clerk who may select to the person proving the contrary. Our line of Coats and Jackets this spring elicited words of praise from every woman who visited this store. The showing was a most comprehensive one, embracing as it did the choicest efforts of over a dozen of the leading eastern manufacturers. Our sales were simply enormous, but anticipating the opening of at least one more store this spring, we purchased more liberally than error we would never have been able to supply the demands made upon this store, and as it was we had to duplicate numerous orders. Now, however, we propose to clear the store of every Spring Coat and Jacket and those who have delayed purchasing a spring garment on account of expense will, when they stop to think of the chilly breezes that blow from the lake even in midsummer, make haste to take their pick of these light and fashionable, but comfortable outer garments.

- Clearing Cut on Jackets

Jackets at..... $2.98
- All our $7.00 and $8.00 Covert Jackets, both loose and tight fitting, for this

- All our $10 Jackets at this sale..... $4.98
- All our $12 and $15 Jackets for this spring clearing sale at..... $6.68

The above prices include everything in the Jacket line—fancy checks, small plaids, grayish effects, etc. Individual descriptions are not attempted for lack of space and because you would want to see and try on the garments before you bought at all events, but rest assured that there are pleasant surprises in store for you.

These garments have been greatly admired by all and the unprecedented low prices we have placed on them will make them disappear like dew on a summer's morn. Among the lot will be found a few coats that are worth $8.00.

The lots enumerated above do not contain over 200 garments, so it behooves you to be among the first comers.

Alteration Department

Our alteration department is in charge of an experienced tailor lately from one of the largest cloak and suit houses in the east.
His work is beyond criticism, and in case a garment needs altering we can assure our patrons that when it leaves the workroom, it will possess that absolute perfection in fit for which the Hein-Ornstein store is noted. Extra help has been provided for this Clearing Sale and we can assure, both our city and out-of-town patrons, prompt delivery of goods.

When Millinery is Loveliest

A few months ago we all agreed that millinery was at its loveliest in fall and winter. That was before the coming of the summer hat. Since its arrival we have had a change of heart. Of course, millinery is at its loveliest in the summer time, at least so we think at the present moment.
One cannot conceive of anything lovelier than the rose laden leghorn hats, the dainty lingerie hats and hosts of other summery styles now shown. Prevailing fashions in brief include the sailor hat in hundreds of pretty modifications, both for general out-door wear and for dressy occasions, also picturesque leghorn and lingerie hats. Added to these are scores of Eryx hats, wondrous in their dainty dyes and fascinating transparency. There are Tagal braids and Java body hats in endless number, with fine French Clips and Milands, too.

Three clearing sales every year will characterize this store—Spring, Summer and Winter.
We do not propose under any circumstances to carry spring goods into summer or summer goods into the fall and winter. So far our customers have shown the keenest interest in these events, and this spring clearing sale cannot fail to prove more attractive, if it is possible, than the others, for the reason that it comes so early, that every offering is so choice and that the prices are cut to a point that would be competitors' shudder.

A Slaughter in the JACKET AND COAT Section.

Nothing less than an unchangeable determination to never carry coats and jackets from one season to another would ever induce a merchant to make the sacrifice we are making—sacrifice of values and manufacturer's cost that these price stories will tell. We have mentioned before that WE DID NOT HAVE ONE WINTER COAT OR JACKET LEFT FROM THE WINTER SEASON TO CARRY OVER. THE LAST ONE WAS SOLD BEFORE THE COLD WEATHER WAS OVER. We know this is a statement that will make some would-be competitors "sit up and take notice," but it is a fact that we can make affidavit to and can prove, and we will give $500.00 to any charity they may select to the person proving the contrary. Our line of Coats and Jackets this spring elicited words of praise from every woman who visited this store. The showing was a most comprehensive one, embracing as it did the choicest efforts of over a dozen of the leading eastern manufacturers. Our sales were simply enormous, but perhaps purchased more liberally than we otherwise would. However, had we not made this fortunate error we would never have been able to supply the demands made upon this one store, and as it was we had to duplicate numerous orders. Now, however, we propose to clear the store of every Spring Coat and Jacket and those who have delayed purchasing a spring garment on account of expense will, when they stop to think of the already breezes that blow from the lake even in mid-summer, make haste to take their pick of these light and fashionable, but comfortable outer garments.

Clearing Cut on Jackets

All our $12 and $15 Jackets for this spring clearing sale at..... $6.68

The above prices include everything in the Jacket line—fancy checks, small plaids, grayish effects, etc. Individual descriptions are not attempted for lack of space and because you would want to see and try on the garments before you bought at all events, but rest assured that there are pleasant surprises in store for you.

These garments have been greatly admired by all and the unprecedented low prices we have placed on them will make them disappear like dew on a summer's morn. Among the lot will be found a few coats that are worth $8.00.

The lots enumerated above do not contain over 200 garments, so it behooves you to be among the first comers.

Alteration Department

Our alteration department is in charge of an experienced tailor lately from one of the largest cloak and suit houses in the east. His work is beyond criticism, and in case a garment needs altering we can assure our patrons that when it leaves the workroom, it will possess that absolute perfection in fit for which the Hein-Ornstein store is noted. Extra help has been provided for this Clearing Sale and we can assure, both our city and out-of-town patrons, prompt delivery of goods.

When Millinery is Loveliest

A few months ago we all agreed that millinery was at its loveliest in fall and winter. That was before the coming of the summer hat. Since its arrival we have had a change of heart. Of course, millinery is at its loveliest in the summer time, at least so we think at the present moment. One cannot conceive of anything lovelier than the rose laden leghorn hats, the dainty lingo hats and hosts of other summer styles now shown. Prevailing fashions in brief include the sions, also picturesque leghorn and lingo hats. Added to these are scores of Pyrexin hats, wondrous in their dainty tins and fascinating transparency. There are Tagal braids and Java body hats in endless number, with fine French Clips and Milands, too.

Three clearing sales every year will characterize this store—Spring, Summer and Winter. We do not propose under any circumstances to carry spring goods into summer or summer goods into the fall and winter. So far our customers have shown the keenest interest in these events and this spring clearing sale cannot fail to prove more attractive, if it is possible, than the others, for the reason that it comes so early that every offering is so choice and that the prices are cut to a point that would be competitors' shudder.

One Man's Evil

By EFFIE ROWLAND

"Three days later I had a rather pleasant surprise—this being the unexpected arrival of a letter from my father containing a check for a large amount of money. Only a few words accompanied the check. These were to the effect that, having heard of my indiscretion, my father desired to put an end to the matter at once. It was a very kind letter, and it took a weight off my heart. I lost no time in cashing this check and taking the money to my creditors. There was sufficient to meet all I owed. I wondered, as I did this, if I had wronged Gerald by quarreling with him. It seemed to me as if this gift from my father must have been brought about by his doing. I was touched when this became a conviction in my mind, and at the same time that I wrote to Sir Maurice, thanking him in the best words I could for his great generosity, I wrote also to my cousin, telling him what had happened, and asking him if I ought not to express gratitude to him also. That was the last day, Ben, Hubert Tenby said, 'that I knew what the word happiness meant! That same evening I received a hurriedly written letter from Lady Charlotte Singleton, desiring me to go and see her the following day. She mentioned in her letter that she was very much upset. I was very little prepared for what awaited me when I reached her on the following day. I found her indeed in great trouble. Her jewels had been stolen, and it was evident to me before I had gone very far into the matter that this robbery could have been done by no outside person, but only by one who, like myself, was well acquainted with the way in which they were kept. Can you guess the end of my story now?'"

Ben Coop looked into the other man's face.

"Surely, they never tried to say you took these jewels, did they?"

"They not only said it, they proved it, Ben. The young man started to his feet. 'When I look back I seem to have been hemmed in on every side. Everything was against me; even I, myself, saw how hard it was to disbelieve the evidence put forward. I had been the last person to whom Lady Charlotte had explained the working of the safe in which her jewels were kept. My need for money was well known. I am afraid I had given lots of people the right to regard me as rather a careworn fellow. In any case, the whole world was against me, especially when, in addition to this blow, my father wrote, declaring that he had never sent the money I acknowledged, and denouncing the check I had cashed as a forgery! I cannot give you line for line and word for word all that happened. I must let you try and fill in the pieces for yourself. I was made an outcast from my home. There was nothing for me to do but to leave the country as quickly as I possibly could. In this sorry plight it seemed to me that the only friend I had in the world was my cousin Gerald. He not only professed to be amazed and bewildered at all that had happened, but declared himself to be shocked and grieved that any one knowing me should believe me guilty of such dishonorable conduct. It was he who went with me that wretched day that I sailed from England. I am not one who doubts easily; but the truth of Gerald's treachery was revealed most surely a little later on. Not content with driving me in shame from my father's home, not content with having blackened my career, taking everything from me in the old country, he worked his vengeance out still further. I had not been a month away before his vengeance began to reach me. I fell into the hands of men whom I know now must have been Gerald's accomplices. Friendless and almost penniless, I was an easy dupe to these men, and almost before I realized what I was doing I found myself arrested as an accomplice of a gang of well-known burglars, convicted, and given a heavy sentence. And I should be now in the prison had it not been for that day's work in your little station, yonder. I little expected to find gratitude from any of my warders, yet it is always the unexpected that comes in life; and when that poor fellow was recovered, he left no effort untried to give me my freedom. The fact that I had been a good-conduct man," Hubert said, with a bitterness that was most painful, "went of course, in my favor. I also, it seems, had a friend at court, although I knew nothing of this till afterward. The fact of the matter had taken a sharp interest in me, and he and the warden together managed to give me my freedom. That is why you see me here to-night."

Ben Coop's hands came down firmly, yet tenderly, on the young man's shoulder.

"Ay, but it makes my blood boil to hear what you have been telling me. It's so like what Robert Tenby would have been. There's work for you to do, I am not a man to preach revenge, but I am a man to urge any other to stand up for his honor, no matter at what a cost; and you must stand up for yours, my dear lad. What are your plans? You will surely have something in your mind?"

Hubert Tenby stood and stretched himself full height.

"I am free," he said, in low, vibrant tones. "That is the first thing I am trying to realize, and after that comes the memory of my lost honor. I have nothing to go upon, you know, only this hideous belief that Gerald has been my enemy all through. It does not seem as if I could die, or let my father go, till we have looked into each other's eyes again. I want to hear him say that I am his son—no mean, shattering blow that would fall back upon such wretched dishonesty as that that led to my charge. I want, too, to see my sister."

He paused, and Ben Coop seemed to understand that pause. He had loved himself once; he knew what was passing in Hubert Tenby's heart.

"It is not only the old home, and the father and the sister," Ben said to himself; "there is some one else—some one even dearer than these!"

CHAPTER IV.

Lady Betty Marchmont was in a very bad temper. The coming of her husband's niece had been a signal for an entire change in her existence. For the first time in her life she found herself compelled to play a secondary role. It was most mortifying and equally incomprehensible that the world—her world—should suddenly have determined to regard Antonia as a beauty.

The girl seemed to find great pleasure in being with her uncle, in looking after that much-neglected man, and in trying by every little thoughtful act to show him affection and attention. She went out very rarely with Lady Betty; but she had been out quite enough to attract attention.

Another thing that annoyed Lady Betty was the apparent indifference with which Antonia took all that came in the closest possible manner. She was not impressed with any of the smart people with whom she was brought in contact. She was not in the least an ordinary girl.

Her clothes were simplicity itself; yet even Lady Betty was obliged to confess that the style in which the girl dressed herself was one that enhanced her charms threefold.

It was such a contrast, too, to her own costly and fashionable raiment, and yet everything that Antonia wore came from the hands of one of the most celebrated dressmakers in London. That was what surprised Lady Betty so much, that this girl, who came, as she phrased it, "from the wilds of nowhere," should have had not only a marked individuality but a certain knowledge of the world.

The gowns that Antonia wore made her open her eyes, for, despite their simplicity, they were cut and shaped by the hand of a genius.

It was the same thing with the big picturesque hats and the small, Quaker-like bonnets which Antonia wore alternately. All this was all to Lady Betty.

"If she had been one of the cleverest women in the world, she could not have hit upon a more splendid idea," the little lady said to herself more than once as Antonia's beauty was revealed, perhaps, in some new light. "What the world likes is change. All we other women seem cut out in the same pattern. She stands alone! What will Gerald think of her, I wonder?"

She began to be quite eager for Antonia and Mr. Tenby to meet. She spoke of him frequently. It was soon evident to the girl that this particular man occupied much of Lady Betty's thoughts. His photograph was given the place of honor in every room which Lady Betty occupied, and Antonia was quite familiar with the fact that great things were expected of Gerald Tenby.

Antonia listened to all this quite calmly, but as the days went by and Tenby never made his appearance, the girl had a sense of bitter satisfaction.

"Gerald!" she would say to herself between her teeth. "He can't face me, well, I can wait—wait all my life, if I need be; and though I may never know happiness, though I may never see Hubert again, I will not go to my grave till I have punished this enemy."

This thought was in her mind more prominently than ever one night as she sat in Lady Betty's box at the opera, listening with dull ears to the voice of a celebrated singer.

People came and went in Lady Betty's box—but Antonia never moved until the door opened to admit another arrival, and the sound of Gerald Tenby's voice fell on her ear. Then a flood of color spread over her face, her little hands clinched themselves round the fan she held. It seemed as if, when she drew her breath, she were going to take some plunge. The next moment she had looked around with a radiant smile and was holding out her hand.

"You did not expect to see me in London," she said, as she noted that Gerald Tenby drew back and hardly knew how to approach her.

Lady Betty looked from one to the other half impatiently.

"You never told me that you knew Gerald," she said.

"I never realized that your Gerald and mine were one and the same."

Tenby fixed his eyes upon her eagerly. Those casual words of hers sent a kind of flame to his heart. Her beauty struck him as being greater than ever.

He looked at her eyes. They met his fearfully, and yet half shyly, as if they confessed that she desired forgetfulness for that last time they had been together, pardon for all those bitter words she had hurled against him.

Gerald Tenby's heart beat wildly. It seemed to him like some wonderful dream to sit there and look at Antonia in her soft white gown and to hear her voice speaking to him gently. The rest of the evening passed like magic.

When Lady Betty rose to fluster away to half a dozen bulls, Gerald covered her and her companion to their carriage. Fresh wonderment and delight filled his heart as Antonia put her slender hand in his and smiled again into his eyes.

It had needed but this to complete his triumph. He had never realized till this moment how much he had loved her.

The night was warm, and he determined to walk from the opera house. As he passed along his eye was suddenly caught by the placard of an evening newspaper, and he came to a standstill.

For an instant his brain reeled. He could hardly decipher the big words clearly, then the mist rolled away, and he stood facing the fact that his triumph had indeed come, for this placard set forth to the world the news of the death of the great north-country millionaire, Sir Maurice Tenby—a death which had occurred suddenly a few hours before.

It was difficult for Gerald Tenby to draw his breath easily in this moment. It was the moment for which he had stained his soul with sin, the moment for which he had schemed and prayed. Now that it was come, he hardly dared grasp it.

His limbs trembled under him. He turned and hailed a cab. Just as he was stepping into it, a hand was laid on his shoulder, and a voice spoke in his ear:

"Good evening, Sir Gerald Tenby!"

There was a strange sneer in the voice. Tenby's foot was on the step of the hansom, his hand was gripping the rail. So he stood for the space of a long silence.

An instant before, his brain had been reeling with delight; now darkness had fallen upon him, utter, stifling darkness—the darkness of a fear that was almost despair.

Antonia Marchmont did a strange thing that same night when she found herself alone in her room. She looked about her in a wild, hunted sort of way, then she tore from her right hand the delicate glove that had covered it, and lighting a candle, she held the glove in the flame till the skin caught fire and smoldered to ashes.

"I feel," she said to herself, between her teeth, "as if I were a great traitor as he is. To-night, when he came to me, I almost abandoned him. Oh! Antonia cried, throwing out her arms, and walking to and fro restlessly, "how is it possible that a man can be so base, so cruel? How can he sleep at night? Does not Hubert's white, miserable face come to haunt him?"

As long as she lived, Antonia would never forget the awful moment when news was given to her of Hubert's disgrace. It was her father who had spoken that sad story, and for the first time in his life he had looked upon Antonia in a different light.

"At least," he had said, speaking aloud his thoughts, "though you are a girl, you spare me dishonor."

"Hubert Tenby is incapable of dishonor! Though all the world should be against him in this, I would stake my life on his honor," she had said, passionately. Lord Marchmont had looked at her with a dry smile.

"You are right to be loyal, Antonia," he said, in his calm way; "but your loyalty lacks discrimination. Even faith such as yours must be shaken when put to face with proofs."

"I do not believe in these proofs, father," she had said. "There is something in all this that will be made clear some day; but whether this happens, or does not happen, nothing will change me. I know Hubert; and, knowing him, I must believe in him!"

Lord Marchmont had only shrugged his shoulders, and then had gone back to his study. To-night she was going once again over the situation.

"Gerald Tenby always hated Hubert," she was saying to herself. "How many times have I seen him looking at Hubert with that strange hatred in his eyes! Though he put a curb on his lips, he could not utterly hide his feelings. If it had never come to me before, I should have seen his hate that one day when we met on the road to the Court, and I said such plain words to him. I took him by surprise, and for one instant I saw his heart, and I knew that he hated Hubert with a hate that not even death could crush out."

She rose with a sigh as she put away some photographs and locked the box which held them.

SNAKE BIRD EASILY TAMED.

It Will Fight Hens and Turkeys and Even the Dog.

The snake bird is easily tamed when taken young, says Forest and Stream.

The Rev. John Bachman, who reared some of these birds, said: "My pet was tame from the beginning of its captivity, and followed me about the house, the yard and garden, until I thought it quite troublesome in consequence of its peculiar attachment to me. It is a fearless bird, keeping at bay the hens and turkeys in the yard and never sparing any dog that dared to pass by it, dealing blows right and left with its sharp-pointed bill and occasionally posting itself at the trough where they are fed to prevent them from taking a morsel of food until he has intimidated them sufficiently, then he leaves them to share whatever he does not relish."

"It was not until my bird was fully fledged that I found it willing or anxious to go to the water, and then whenever I saw me going toward the pond seeming to say, 'Pray let me go.' On my opening this gate it at once followed me, waddling like a duck, and no sooner was it in sight of the favorite element than it immediately left itself in, not with a plunge or a dive, but by dropping from a plank into the stream, where for a while it would swim like a duck, then, dipping its long neck, it would dive for the purpose of procuring fish."

"This bird sleeps in the open air, and during the warm nights perches on the house or the bars of the fence, with its head under its wing, placed there from above its back, and in rainy weather it often sits in that same place for nearly the whole day. It appears to be very susceptible to cold, retreating to the kitchen, and near the fire, battling with the dog or the cooks for the most desirable place on the hearth."

AGRICULTURAL

in the seed. Every time the land is cultivated more weeds will germinate to be killed, and the more weeds that can be destroyed before the regular crop start the fewer there will be to combat later on.

Start the Pigs Right.

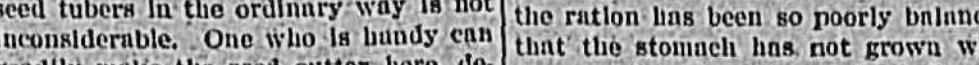

The man who starts off his pigs on the corn ration about as soon as he can after they are weaned is laying in a store of trouble for himself later. There is a trouble known to swine raisers as contracted stomach, which results from an improper ration. The animal is apparently "off its feed," but the fact is, the ration has been so poorly balanced that the stomach has not grown with the growth of the rest of the body. If the young pigs are to be allowed a range they will do more or less rooting, eating of soil and sod; as this is their nature, it will not hurt them, but if they are placed where one does not wish the soil uprooted, then the animals must be ringed. If middlings and oilmeal are introduced with the corn ration there will be considerably less trouble. Some of the stock foods on the market have their greatest value to the swine raiser who does not feed a balanced ration and if these stock foods can be obtained practically free from drugs or condiments, they are very valuable in such cases.

What Lime Does for Land.

Farmers often say that they do not need to use lime, because they use large quantities of it in fertilizer. Ground bone and other forms of phosphate contain lime. We cannot obtain phosphoric acid in ordinary fertilizers without lime. Such farmers mistake the most necessary function of lime in the soil. Air-slaked lime has a chemical action which sweetens the soil, makes it more compact or sets free other forms of plant food. This is quite distinct from its power to provide actual food for the plants. The lime in the bone or phosphate may in time serve as plant food, but the air-slaked lime is needed for the more important service.

Runners of this corn marker should be 2x6 inches by 2 feet. The side arm is fastened to sled on a swivel, and is pulled along by attaching a rope to shoe and hooked to singletree as shown. This arm is made 1 1/2 x 1 1/2 inches and 10 1/2 feet long, for rows 3 1/2 feet apart. Of course this arm is reversible.

Winter Chickens.

Chickens can be hatched in the winter months and profitably raised. You can hatch them from Sept. 1 until June 1. Other months are unprofitable. Chickens can endure cold weather better than extreme heat. Disease, lice and mites always come with summer months. The expense of feeding is no greater in winter. Profits can be realized from broods hatched in November, December and January. Of course, winter chicks do not grow quite so fast, but they produce a heavier coat of feathers. They grow more compact and solid if hatched early in the winter, and will be just right for April and May, when the price is at the highest point.

Free Government Seeds.

The agricultural papers of the country have for years shown up the abuse of the annual congressional seed distribution. Last year the appropriation was 200,000, and over 50,000,000 packages of seed were distributed. The postage on these seeds if paid by individuals would cost about a half million dollars, and the labor, printing and other expenses would bring it up to over a million. The seeds usually are of poor quality and go for the most part to sections of the country where they are not acclimated, to carry political favors. It is an abuse that should immediately be discontinued.—Farm, Field and Fireside.

Too Much Specialization.

The hard experience of last year taught many of the Southern truck growers the old lesson of diversification, or in other words, not to put all their eggs into one basket. This year many of the farmers who staked all on one crop and failed last year, are now branching out a little more into fruit growing, etc., as well as the culture of vegetable crops. The indications are for a prosperous season for Southern truckmen, but it is always dangerous for a man of small capital to grow nothing at all but one line of produce.—American Cultivator.

Wireworms.

It is claimed by a New York farmer that wireworms will not live in ground where buckwheat is grown for two seasons and that potato land may be cleared of these worms by growing buckwheat.

Killing Early Weeds.

There are many different kinds of weeds, and some of them start off early in the spring, almost before the frost leaves the ground. It is the early weeds that give the farmer the most trouble. If the land was plowed last fall, cross-plow it the coming spring, and then harrow or cultivate it as often as can be done until time to put

What Life Needed.

A father recently received the following note from a young man:

"Dear Sir—Wood like your doter Jessie's hand in marriage. She and I are in lov, and I think I need a wife. Yures, HENRY."

The father replied by letter, saying: "Friend Henry—You don't need a wife. You need a spelling book. Get one and study it for a year. Then write me again!"

On Monday evening about fifty of the friends of Frank Chinn gathered at his home and gave him a rousing surprise, the occasion being his twenty-second birthday.
The evening was spent in playing cards and other games. Frank was presented with a handsome pipe early in the evening and a few hours later found himself sitting in a beautiful Morris chair, wondering when and how it got in amongst the crowd.
But on learning that it was a token of remembrance he thanked them most heartily for the present. Dainty refreshments were served at a late hour after which all departed for their respective homes, wishing Frank many happy returns of the day.

The Antioch "Scrub Ball Team" went over to play a game with the "Trevor game was very exciting from beginning to end and it is hoped that the "Trevor Pick-ups" will play a return game in the near future and incidentally try to reverse the score, which was 13 to 0 in favor of Antioch. P. S.—The umpire escaped without bodily injury.

Now that our village fathers have made a start in the right direction by putting up sign boards at the village limits prob-hibiting automobiles from running faster than ten miles an hour through the village, would it not be a good plan to enforce Section 7 of an ordinance passed May 25, 1893, which says, "No person shall im-moderately ride or drive any horse in any avenue, street, alley or lane within the limits of the village etc." Most any evening during the summer we can see two or three rigs coming down through Main street as fast as the horses can go, regardless of the pedestrians crossing the street.
While it without doubt is very enjoyable for the occupants of the vehicles, they should not forget, that they thereby endanger the lives and limbs of such pedestrians, especially ladies and children.

Sunlight for All the Leaves.

The telegraph plant of India has a method all its own for catching the sunshine. Each of its leaves is composed of three leaflets. The larger terminal one erects itself during the day and turns sharply down at night, while the other two smaller leaflets move constantly, day and night, describing complete circles with a peculiar jerking motion like the second hand of a watch. Occasionally they rest for a period and then go on again, thus bringing every part of every leaf to the full action of the sunlight.—Telegraph Age.

"Tell me," requests the young person, entering the study of the gray-bearded philosopher, "what is the difference between friendship and love?" The gray-bearded philosopher studies the table thoughtfully for a moment or two, then replies: "Friendship, my son, is a mutual understanding; love is a mutual misunderstanding."—Life.

BIRD HAVEN ON THIS FARM

Illinois Agriculturist Who Keeps Close Guard and Provides Shelter for Birds.

John H. Dorris, who owns a large farm northwest of this city, will not allow a bird of any kind to be killed on his land, writes a Harrisburg (Ill.) correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. He has set aside a number of acres to grow up in underbrush, in which all kinds of birds, especially quail, find a home through the winter; and in the summer the place is alive with birds.

Mr. Dorris claims that hawks do very little damage in comparison with the good they do in killing field mice and rats. There are hundreds of quail on his farm, and they have become so tame that they come to the dooryard for feed. So careful does he watch these birds that he can tell where nearly every bird nests in the brooding season. Last fall one of his hired hands, while driving through the lane with a load of hay, saw a quail sitting on the fence close by, and taking his whip, he knocked it off slightly crippling it. He picked the bird up and took it to the house to feed to the cat.

When Mr. Dorris saw this he rebuked him warmly, questioned him as to where he found the bird, and upon being told remembered where it had a nest. Unhitching one of the horses and saddling him, he rode a mile and a half, placed the bird on its nest, and watched and cared for her until she hatched out her brood. Mr. Dorris' farm is noticeably free from insects that do damage to crops, and he unhesitatingly says this is due to the birds on the place.

CRUEL TRICK ON TWIN.

Freaked Impostor Played It on the Humorist in a Game of Billiards.

Mark Twain told the spectators at the billiard tourney in New York lately what he knew about the game. "The game of billiards has destroyed my naturally sweet disposition," he said. "Once when I was an underpaid reporter in Virginia City, when ever I wished to play billiards, I went out to look for easy marks. One day a stranger came in town and opened a billiard parlor. I looked him over casually. When he proposed a game I answered all right.

"Just knock the balls around a little so that I can get your gait," he said, and when I had done so he remarked: 'I will be perfectly fair with you. I'll play you left-handed.' I felt hurt, for he was cross-eyed, freckled and had red hair, and I determined to teach him a lesson. He won first shot, ran out, took my hair dollar, and all I got was the opportunity to chalk my cue.

"If you can play like that with your left hand," I said, 'I'd like to see you play with your right.'

"I can't," he said; 'I'm left-handed.'

No More Collisions.

By a device now being patented in New York a bell on railway engines rings automatically when the trains are three miles apart, making collisions practically impossible.

Hubbut Lee

by HUBBUT 24567, by Onward, dam Velvet Lee, by Robert Lee, 15302, son of Alcontra 729, and Meg Merrilies, dam of 3, by Electioneer 125, second dam, dam of 2, by Volunteer 55, third dam Miss Noline, daughter of Hammond and Will Star, dam of Artillery 21224, sire of 12 in 230.

Hubbut Lee is a handsome seal brown stallion, stands 15 1/2 hands high and weighs 1100 pounds; foaled 1902. Bred by George F. Swarts, Freeport, Ill. Indivdualy he is a horse of grand finish and plenty of substance, with a fine disposition short back, but a stout body, good head and neck, with the best of feet and legs. His blood lines are of the best, as will be seen by his tabulated pedigree—the most popular and prolific speed producing combination in trotting blood lines, the kind that get the money on the race course. That he will bet speed and grand road qualities there is no doubt, as he not only inherits but possesses these qualities in a marked degree. His dam Velvet Lee is a comparatively young mare and is phenomenally fast. She was taken sick and has never been handled since.

He will stand at Rosecrans, Ill., at $15 to insure. Will not be responsible for accidents or escapes but best of care will be taken of mares sent to me.
